

ABOUT HUNGARY

Culture and history

The question 'What are Hungarians like?' is not an easy one to answer. They are colorful and diverse. According to visitors, Hungarians are talented, romantic, happy and above all warmhearted. Hungary is a mixture of eastern and western cultural influences together with the traditions of a 1000-year-old state. Pagan tribes arrived in the Carpathian Basin around 896 and assimilated the smaller and greater local tribes. Later, throughout their history, Hungarian rulers invited priests, artists and teachers to enrich Hungarian culture. Monuments of the Roman Empire as well as spas from the age of the 150-year-long Turkish rule, medieval castles and magnificent cathedrals all bear witness to a stirring history. The four royal cities of Esztergom, Székesfehérvár, Buda and Visegrád are all worth a visit, as are Debrecen, the eastern European centre of Calvinism, the Mediterranean city of Pécs and the artistic centre of Szentendre.

ABOUT BUDAPEST

The capital of Hungary straddles a curve of the River Danube where Transdanubia meets the Great Plain. One Hungarian in five lives in Budapest totaling a number of 2 million inhabitants.

More romantic than Warsaw, more cosmopolitan than Prague, Budapest is the 'first city' of East-Central Europe. With the River Danube as its pulse, Budapest beats to a rhythm of indomitable spirit cloaked in beauty and charm. The Hungarian capital is exquisitely laid out on both sides of the Danube, claiming one of the most spectacular panoramic views in all of Europe. You can bear witness from the Buda side of the river on the Castle Hill. From here, the spires of the Houses of Parliament and the Chain Bridge can be seen awash in golden light every evening. Their reflection on the river, combined with the dotted lights of Pest, is simply awe-inspiring. So are the buildings of the Castle Hill: the neo-Gothic Matthias Church, surrounded by quaintly restored medieval homes on cobblestone streets; the imposing Royal Palace, and the turreted Fishermen's Bastion.
