

KODOLANYI JÁNOS UNIVERSITY

9TH INTERNATIONAL WEEK
8-12 APRIL 2019

TEACHING MOBILITY

The 9th International Week is offered to both domestic and international students in the form of a condensed elective course under the title:

“Academy of International Lecturers – Contemporary Trends in Applied Sciences”

We expect the participation of lecturers who are willing to offer 3 classes (1 class = 90 minutes). In any of the disciplines enlisted below and who wish to provide our students with international perspectives using interactive teaching methodology.

Purpose of the course: The ninth edition of the KJU International Week organized as a series of lectures is meant to improve the intercultural competencies of students. The seminars held by the guest lecturers of our partner universities reflect the latest achievements in science and research and aim at providing students with practical knowledge, competencies and innovative approaches. Furthermore, participants will also can experience new pedagogical methods. Due to the multidisciplinary nature of the event, students are free to opt for lectures best suited to their individual interests, skills and/or field of studies. Furthermore, the international exposure might become an asset by providing the student with new perspectives for choosing a subject for their thesis as well as for its completion.

We welcome lectures from the discipline areas of:

- Tourism and Hospitality,
- Business Administration and Management,
- Marketing
- Enterprise Development,
- International Relations,
- IT

- Mass Media and Communication,
- Linguistics,
- History,
- Cultural Management,
- Social Sciences.

Please, note that the deadline for the submission of the registration form and the list of lecture titles is 25 February 2019.

The participation at the international conference during the International Week is free of charge for lecturers
